Thanks, Hillary. Jackie was sworn in at City Hall by the councilwoman and she is now a truly elected and totally unpaid commissioner. She looks forward to dealing with the pressing issues of rats, garbage and bars. Max is a rocket, still up there, but his publisher (Nation Books/Basic) can't keep up. He's like Elvis produced by Folkways records. If we could get him the media, he'd go into orbit. If you can, see his latest video, on the Glenn Beck rally on the Mall, reported from the scene:
http://www.huffingtonpost.com/max-blumenthal/get-the-government-out-of_b_285361.html

Other news: The "Implementing Peace" panel is going for CGI. I think, now, it will happen, despite Gordon's timidity. He did not want to do it himself, partly for the good reason that someone on a panel might use it to corner him on a sticky issue in public, but also because he's unsure of himself and his own ground. Peter is not helpful. While supposedly offering security, he fosters insecurity. That's his MO. Exactly when Peter blows himself up again (would this be third or fourth time?) should be a betting option at Ladbroke's. Shaun met with Declan Kelly in NY and again today in Belfast, all good, delighted to have him in place at last. On your trip to Ireland, Shaun suggests landing in Dublin on the Sunday, not Belfast first, because Sunday is not a good day to engage with the Protestants.

I've now written a quarter-million words on Lincoln, currently in May 1864, things not going well for him and about to get worse. Like Grant, "I propose to fight along this line" until finished--just a few more weeks, I think.

On issues other than the battle of the Wilderness or the August conspiracy against Lincoln I'd need more information to comment. Everything (Middle East, Iran, Afghanistan) seems very spongy. Afghanistan is torquing foreign policy somewhat like Iraq did, though not as much, but still doing so. Without a Middle East negotiating breakthrough, the effect will be even greater. This is part of the torquing factor, too. For what it's worth: I'd keep the military side in Afghanistan on the ledger as DOD responsibility, making clear the sharp demarcation line between military and diplomatic, and emphasize there always the Af/Pak/India nexus, never letting India out of the equation, particularly in perception, because with its inclusion the picture is fundamentally altered. The concept of Af/Pak is inherently a loser. Holbrooke should not be seen as viceroy overall but as diplomat. With too much piled on him he will get more blame and can accomplish less.

All for now. Call or write soon.

Sid

Thanks, Hillary. I don't know about details of Obama's plan, but you looked terrific at the speech. (Lincoln, in 1864, on Obama's plan: "The difficulty is not in stating the principle, it is in applying it.") Too bad Rep. Wilson didn't wear a red pantsuit.

Max continues to rocket--up to #8 overall this am, #1 in every nonfiction category except cookbooks. And last night in a special election Jackie was elected Advisory Neighborhood Commissioner in DC. It was a hard fought race, in fact, and her opponent ran a negative campaign against her on email with the slogan: "She's Not Jackie."

Here's the draft of the article Max has written on the bad Joe Wilson (membership in racist organization) and that will be published today. This should do it.

Let's speak when you have time.

Rep. Joe Wilson's Rebel Yell

Inside the racist klavern that Joe Wilson joined

ent Barack

Obama, "You lie!" during the president's nationally televised speech on healthcare, the fourth term backbencher has emerged as a hero among the conservative grassroots. One of the most enthusiastic endorsements of Wilson's histrionics came from the Sons of Confederate Veterans (SCV), a group that Wilson has belonged to for several years.

"Mr. Wilson, never apologize for allowing your love of truth to overrun your desire to be polite," the SCV Tea Party declared on its website. "It is the liar who must apologize, not the one who identifies the liar!"

Who are the SCV? A once-proud organization of Confederate history buffs and re-enactors who spent their organization's money to restore Civil War-era battlefields and Confederate cemeteries, by 2006 the SCV was substantially taken over by an organized cadre of white supremacist radicals (read here for more background) who sought to turn the nation's oldest Southern historical society into what the veteran white supremacist activist Kirk Lyons called "a modern, 21st century Christian war machine capable of uniting the Confederate community and leading it to ultimate victory." When the racist junta had seized much of the SCV's leadership positions, the Southern Poverty Law Center released an extensive list of SCV officials who belonged to "hate groups."

Lyons, a key leader of the white supremacists who took over the SCV, had harbored dreams of creating a seemingly benign front group for a more sophisticated version of the Ku Klux Klan. "I have great respect for the Klan historically, but, sadly the Klan today is ineffective and sometimes even destructive," Lyons told a German neo-Nazi magazine in 1992. "It would be good if the Klan followed the advice of former Klansman Robert Miles: 'Become invisible. Hang the robes and hoods in the cupboard and become an underground organization.'" With the SCV, Lyons discovered he didn't have to go underground after all.

Once Lyons helped install his close friend, Ron Wilson, as president of the SCV, the organization's political newsletter, <http://fpacscv.org/southernmercury/> The Southern Mercury (where Wilson served as senior editor), transformed into a propaganda mill for crude white supremacist cant. Mailed to all dues-paying members of the SCV - presumably including Rep. Joe Wilson - until it went defunct in 2008, the Mercury has published articles describing blacks as genetically inferior to whites, calling African-Americans as "a childlike people," and warned that if Obama runs for re-election, race riots of an "exceedingly violent nature" would immediately ensure, leaving "entire sections of some of our cities in ruins."

Here are a few highlights from the Southern Mercury:

"After the turn of the 20th century, the white Southerners had disfranchised and segregated the blacks, in perhaps the mildest reaction possible at that time to the blacks' transgressions. The blacks - then a childlike people - had been selling their votes to the Democrats en masse for $.25 apiece in national elections."

--"Where We Stand Now, And How We Got Here," by Frank Conner, Southern Mercury, September/October 2003

"Previously, anthropologists had routinely recorded the notable differences in IQ among the races; but at Columbia, a liberal cultural anthropologist named Franz Boas...decreed that there were no differences in IQ among the races, and the only biological differences between the blacks and whites were of superficial nature... Meanwhile, the liberals in the media heaped special praise upon black athletes, musicians, singers, and writers - and treated them as typical of the black race. The liberals were creating a false image of the blacks in America as a highly competent people who were being held back by the prejudiced white Southerners."

--Conner, September/October 2003

"It is very clear to me that if Barack Obama should be elected President, he would be extremely anti-white and would demand reparations for slavery and press hard for affirmative action to the degree that it would hurt young whites who were seeking jobs or admission to College and Graduate Schools."

--"Americans Face The Worst Presidential Candidates In History," by Robert Slimp, Southern Mercury, May/June 2008

"I believe that [Obama's] rhetoric and anti-white legislative proposals would stir up racial riots. If he were running for re-election, these riots would turn into an exceedingly violent nature that would seriously damage race relations in America, and leave entire sections of some of our cities in ruins."

--Slimp, May/June 2008

Rep. Joe Wilson could have resigned from the SCV as soon as the organization's takeover by open white supremacists began. But he didn't. Or he could have withdrawn his membership when the SCV's flagship journal turned into a racist rag. But he didn't. Instead, while serving as a state senator, Wilson led an SCV-inspired campaign in 2000 to keep the Confederate flag flying above South Carolina's state capitol. "The Southern heritage, the Confederate heritage, is very honorable," Wilson >proclaimed at the time, responding to critics of the Confederate flag.

Wilson's rebel yell at Obama has electrified the Republican grassroots, filling his campaign coffers with donations >he is soliciting from conservatives across the country and earning the undistinguished, previously unknown backbencher primetime appearances on right-wing talk shows. Wilson has become the new voice of the Republican opposition, reigniting the Lost Cause as a raucous crusade to sabotage healthcare reform.
