He's been contacting many people w the same message that his father wants to stay in some role and that he wants to have a role in leading the political transition, which everyone has told him are not possible. We and our allies and partners are all telling him the same thing that there must be a ceasefire, withdrawal from cities Q's forces have seized, and Q's departure from power and, preferably, from Libya. There has been as yet no positive or realistic response.

For what it is worth, I know Seif al-Islam – once flew w/ him on his jet from Benghazi to London. I have obviously been very vocal in support of intervention and against Gaddafi himself, so have some credibility w/ both sides. If it would be useful to use me in any way, am obviously willing. NYT this morning reports, “To many Libyans who do not support the armed revolt, Seif al-Islam represents a hope for more gradual change.” AM
