This conference brings together approximately 300 members of the Truman Community. They include Truman Fellows – rising policy leaders such as a number of members of your own Policy Planning staff, speechwriters and special assistants for President Obama, senior Hill staffers, and others. Truman Partners who will attend include emerging political leaders, from a number of veterans running for Congress, to the political director of Netroots Nation, state senators, and other political leaders from across the country.

At this conference we wish to challenge our Fellows and Partners. We want them to think expansively, and effectively. We hope to enjoin them to consider the big ideas that could really improve how America conduct our foreign policy and think critically about how to achieve these policies through politics, especially during this election year. We can think of no one better than you to provide them with the inspiration, ingenuity, and effectiveness we seek to instill.
