I will also remind them of positive examples of transitional justice. South Africa is one. Had an interesting conversation yesterday with current S. African amb in Washington, a Muslim activist who spent several days in Cairo two months ago at the invitation of the MB to discuss how to make successful transition to governance. Worth encouraging South Africans, Turks, and others to keep up these kinds of conversations with MB, in addition to our own.

Madam Secretary, I met with them yesterday. Bill Burns meets today with broader Islamists (Tunisians, Moroccans, Egyptians, all together). And Bob Hormats and Bill Taylor meet with the Egyptians today, too. They went to the NSC last night, but I don't have a read-out.

Here is what I sent to Bill and Bob about my meeting with the Egyptians yesterday:

SBU) Bill, Bob -- I know you are both scheduled to see the Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood/Freedom and Justice Party delegations today. I saw a rump part of them yesterday, and they also went to Brookings. I spoke with Martin Indyk last night, [REDACTED]
