B6

Dear all,

I published the following in the Washington Post this morning, reviewing three grand strategies put out by The Atlantic Council (written by Robert Manning), the Council on Foreign Relations (written by Dan Deudney and John Ikenberry), and Patrick Doherty at the New America Foundation. http://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/does-obama-have-a-grand-strategy-for-his-second-term-if-not-he-could-try-one-of-these/2013/01/18/ec78cede-5f27-11e2-a389-ee565c81c565\_story.html

In addition, for anyone who is interested, I wrote up a new approach to grand strategy in a paper I wrote for the Center for a New American Security last June, calling for a grand strategy of network centrality. <http://www.cnas.org/americanpath>

Best,
Anne-Marie
